Annotation: This article provides information on how in today's fast moving world it is of paramount importance to teach English in every educational institution of Internal Affairs in order to cooperate with international organizations, examine foreign experiences, bring up our legislation system to international level of standards and find new ways and methods of fighting against criminality.

Key words: foreign languages, English, cadets, officers, internal affairs, reforms, communication, teaching, international, importance, information.

As everybody is well aware language is a mean of communication among members of society that represents the spirit and history of the particular nation and country. There are more than 7000 languages worldwide, among which English is one of the most popular and is considered as an official language of 67 countries. It is the language of science, business, technology and the most important-education. Knowing English allows one to access the billions of pages of information. This language has increased in importance and is now perceived as a requirement for every officer of internal affairs bodies.

In the last recent decades, radical reforms are being implemented in our country in the sphere of education and number of decrees and laws have been adopted in this framework. Accordingly, our president Shavkat Mirziyoyev has emphasized that it is already time to set up a new system for learning foreign languages in our country which will be a solid foundation for the future, since we have set for ourselves the goal of building a competitive state, on the onwards, graduates of every school, lyceum, college and higher educational institution must have a perfect knowledge of at least two foreign languages. This rule had also been applied in educational institutions of Ministry of Internal Affairs as well.

The Presidential Decree № 5117 was adopted on 19th May in 2021 "On measures to bring the popularization of foreign languages to a qualitatively new level" . As a rational consequence of this legislative document , the Presidential Decree №137 “On approval of the national program on public education” was approved on May 11, 2022. Therefore, the requirement for teaching foreign languages has turned to a main criterion of the activity of all educational establishments.

All the required conditions, as well as wide range of opportunities have been created to learn foreign language skills, moreover, additional preferences are being introduced to students and professionals of any sphere who acquired foreign languages and obtained various certificates in our country. The payments and extra bonuses are quintessence of this mechanism.

Makhmudkho`ja Bekhbudiy, one of the participants of “Jadid” movement in Turkestan, was thoroughly concerned with the importance of foreign languages, stressing out that our youth should at least master four foreign languages as long as we do not want to lag behind the development.

To contemplate on teaching foreign languages especially for cadets of educational institutions of internal affairs, the plausible question arises that why every member of modern society generally needs English. The first and foremost reason to acquire foreign languages for future officers is to integrate to the whole world in all spheres of life as it plays crucial role to communicate with society .

To start with, English is needed in order to obtain high quality knowledge and become skilled professional on any sphere whether it is science, business or liberal arts. It is obvious that more sources of information, including researches, books, articles and scientific investigations are written in this language, which means it is a valuable language for career advancement. Vast majority of academic papers and journals are published in English. Principally, many new solutions of vitally important problems can also be found in English.

Moreover, as we are living now in the century of globally advanced technologies, we must know how to use them and many of them are installed in English. According to a report given by a website “Education first”, it is the language of internet, we can find immediately multitude of any type of information because they are inserted in English, thus it leads to economization of time.

In addition to this, as it is commonly stated that one language is a one person, to clarify if a person learns another language he broadens his horizon, changes his mindset and outlook on life, starts looking at one matter from several different points of view, develops critical and analytical thinking which is one of the most essential skills nowadays, it can improve cognitive abilities and memory retention. According to a Chinese proverb, to learn language is to have another window from which to look at the world.

And finally, there are multitude amount of developed countries around the world, thus giving primacy to acquisition of English language as it opens up enormous chances to proximate the history, culture and spiritual life, as well as there will be access to their material, economic and political situation of any country. In turns, it helps to representatives of internal affairs bodies to enhance their skills and theoretical knowledge by examining foreign experience. All the above-stated reasons justify the need to stipulate English into one of the compulsory subjects in educational institutions of ministry of internal affairs.

Cadets of the Academy of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Uzbekistan considerably need foreign language competencies so that they could actively, successfully, and professionally conduct their duties not only locally, but also participate in various organizations and missions. In many cases employees success in multinational operations against crime very often depends on ability to communicate and express themselves in English.

Future officers as well as employees of internal affairs bodies are obligated to protect the rights and freedoms of citizens, ensure public safety and order, enforce the law, prevent and investigate criminal activities. All these skills are cultivated in the specialized educational institutions. In order to obtain high professional knowledge and become competent specialist, the crucial part of curriculum should comprise not only law subjects but also languages simultaneously.

The most valued personal qualities of law enforcement staff are considered the courage, devotion, physical and mental strength, interpersonal and communicative skills, and the culture of negotiation and rationalization. Relatively, communicative competence-is one of the most significant characteristic of a specialist in the field of law enforcement bodies . officers of internal affairs perceive that the significance and willingness to carry out official communication at a high level with various categories of citizens are of paramount importance.

In this broader sense, through acquisition of foreign languages cadets familiarize with new methods and forms of fighting against criminality and enhance criminogenic situation in their upcoming career by analyzing the experience of advanced foreign countries. Foreign experience in fighting against crime can be observed through participating in various international conferences, commonly held in English.

As it is stipulated in new Constitution of our Republic, Uzbekistan is secular country and human dignity is utmost, laws and regulations have to meet international standards. The political and social life are regulated by the rule of law and inviolability of the primacy of Constitution. In this regard, it is important to enhance international contracts, agreements, normative legal documents and their particular features, comprehend the juxtaposition between them and utilize beneficial parts of these legal scopes. Specialists who have higher law education in English are indispensable part in this regard and the implementation of all these affairs rests them up.

To conclude, it is practically inconceivable to make a career without the knowledge of foreign language, learning English enables officers of internal affairs vast majority of opportunities in various spheres and professional services as it is the language of international communications, science, technologies, internet and education. As it is stated above, many reforms are being implemented in the sphere of teaching foreign languages to cadets, however, there is always room for improvement.
